Description of trip: This week we learnt from our previous mistakes of forgetting hats and gloves. As a result, we were toasty and warm. It also helped that it was a little warmer this week. We have gotten better at reading maps and sharing the load of map-reading. When we get to the end of a path or road, our teacher will often ask which way are we going next? We mostly get the correct answer and will often start by discussing where we are and orientating the map. This week we walked a slightly shorter route, totalling 4 miles. But we ended up walking down some muddy tracks and through fields and across foot bridges. It was fun to navigate different routes and paths. Next week we are going to focus on the Ordnance Survey map symbols and use this to navigate around our local town where the school is based.
