- Learn how to be respectful and take turns, when playing games.

Description of trip: This week we decided to stay at school for our experience day because the weather has been very unpredictable, plus some of us got new board games for Christmas, so we thought we would try them out. All of the pupils were encouraged to bring in board games. One pupil brought in Unstable Unicorns. We started the day with a quick game of Boggle, a classic game. We then watched two episodes of The Traitors on BBC iPlayer before we played The Traitors board game. One player is the traitor and the rest are faithful. They have to complete trials as a team and each round they have to try and guess who the traitor is. It was fun to play and we correctly guessed the traitor. In one of the trials the team had to build an inverted pyramid. They had 2 minutes to balance 5 items one on top of the other, with the bottom layer being the narrowest and the top layer being the widest.

Quotes:

"I think NB is the traitor!"
