Description of trip: This was a first week back after half term, so we were eased into a shorter walk to get the legs going again. The weather was strange today. It was warm, yet there was the threat of rain on the horizon. We had a bet about whether it would rain or not. We anticipated it may rain, just as we were arriving back at the car. That is exactly what happened. It was a fresh welcoming drizzle, that cooled us down. We walked along fields and spotted many farms. Most farms in this area are agricultural, but one farm we came across had livestock. Chickens and turkeys, cows and sheep. Even some horses. We sat in a field alongside the chickens and turkeys and ate our sandwiches. The turkeys kept going 'gobble, gobble'. It was very funny. As we were approaching the car we all guessed how many miles we had walked. Today's walk was 3.5 miles. A great warm up for the weeks to come.

Quotes:

"Gobble, gobble"

"A purple poppy"

"Do you think it is going to rain?"
